

The use of cell phones or other electronic devices aboard commercial aircraft is exclusively a safety-of-flight issue. These devices can interfere with the accurate operation of VOR/DME, ILS, and GPS equipment, just to name a few. Physically interfering with a flight crew member is a federal crime. Electronically interfering with the navigation of an aircraft, which could cause the deaths of all on board should, likewise, continue to be prohibited.